Do people have real dinner parties anymore? Do you bring out the fine china and silver flatware any longer? Why do hosts serve their guests on paper plates? It's been something that I have noticed— the change from formality to casualness over the last 40 years. I remember my mother going to a ball wearing long white gloves; now many will not dress up to go out for an evening on the town.

With this exhibition we are trying to bring back a little of the formal to your everyday life. The delight in getting ready for a party, the care in setting a table shouldn't be just for guests, why not use your nice candlesticks, the cloth napkins and put them in napkin rings for your family? Even mac and cheese looks better on a nicely set table and you can enlist kids to help set it. Come in and see what new ideas for tableware our artists have cooked up and why we think you should use your nice things everyday... and if you're coming to the reception why not add a touch of flair.

Zilberschmuck gratefully acknowledges "So Perfect for You" for the custom-made table skirt and napkins for this exhibition.
